ISSUE NO. 70 OCTOBER 2021

THE SEASONS OF CREATION

series has given us plenty to reflect upon. The main theme has been Oikos, meaning home. We have considered the intricate web of connections which make up our global home. We have pondered God's wisdom and peace, as Jesus understood it, and offered some thoughts and reflections. We have prayed for creation and for one another, through lockdown and transition, through global unrest and local tempest. In a time of false starts and staged new freedoms, we have the opportunity to reflect upon the sort of church we want to be into the future.

In a lecture at the University of Ghana in February 2020, Rowan Williams, former Archbishop of Canterbury, spoke about the coronavirus crisis. Linking it with the continuing environmental crisis, he observed that the virus does not read maps. Nor does the changing climate, nor the havoc it brings to millions of lives. They pay no attention to political boundaries. They treat the human race on equal terms. These crises remind us that we are an interconnected reality. In a most unwelcome way, the physical world is teaching us some theological truths, truths about God, and about ourselves. Can we listen? <sup>1</sup>

Much information about weekly happenings in the Partnership comes through emails from Annette or Karen. If you don't have access to email or are missing these, please inform us so we can get a copy to you in some other way.

LECTIONARY Readings Year B

After Pentecost

A period of time that varies in length depending on whether Easter is early or late. In this period, the Church recalls its faith in the Holy Trinity. It seeks to relate its faith as a people of God to Christ's mission in the world. It commences with Trinity Sunday and concludes with the feast of Christ the King.

COCO REPORT

CoCo met on 4th September by Zoom. The first item on the agenda was discussion about some changes to the Mission Study Report and concerns were raised about the description of some of the churches as being in 'remote areas'. It was felt that the more apt description was 'rural' as none of the MRP churches are in remote areas.

The signing and acceptance of the MOU for the Partnership will happen at the next Partnership Combined Service, which will be as soon as the Covid restrictions allow.

We talked about what we can do to serve the gospel in the community today and we are all finding this a challenge with Covid restrictions. Several suggestions and comments were made:

- We need to be listening for opportunities to support the community
- Education in the use of available resources for worship
- People without computers or computer skills are missing out
- Appropriate passages of scripture could be displayed on church noticeboards
- A new book by Rev Sally Douglas - The Church as Salt - was recommended for reading
- Frustration occurs when events are planned, then cannot happen because restrictions change.

A pilot project is being planned to test the use of Audio-Visual equipment, possibly between Gisborne and Kyneton. This will then give some guidance as to the equipment required for regular use of Audio-Visual communication between the churches around the Partnership.

The need for the implementation of the Essential Safety Measures that are required by Government legislation was discussed at length. The repairs being undertaken at Riddells Creek and Woodend will mean that they will have the appropriate documentation in place at the end of that process. All other church properties will need to start this process and it was recommended that we all try to have the initial step of an Occupancy Permit or a Maintenance Determination in place by the end of September. The services of Statcom - contractors recommended by Synod - can then be engaged to oversee the rest of the process across all the churches in the Macedon Ranges if required.

Scripture has much to teach us also. One of my favourite passages is the call of Abraham. It is a passage which gives voice to the urgings of Holy Mystery for us to enter into new places in new ways. The story tells of Abraham being called, being sent, and being a blessing.

Gen 12:1-4a NRSV

12 Now the Lord said to Abram, "Go from your country and your kindred and your father's house to the land that I will show you. <sup>2</sup>I will make of you a great nation, and I will bless you, and make your name great, so that you will be a blessing. <sup>3</sup>I will bless those who bless you, and the one who curses you I will curse; and in you all the families of the earth shall be blessed."

<sup>4</sup>So Abram went, as the Lord had told him; and Lot went with him. Abram was seventy-five years old when he departed from Haran.

Dare we listen to God's call upon our faith communities at this time? Dare we take steps into new territories? Dare we be a blessing to our communities and creation? The saying goes that the future is ours, but that is somewhat hubristic. The future is God's, and we have the opportunity to join in where the Spirit is leading. Blessings to all.

A COLOURFUL GIFT

In 2006 I was given a beautiful gift which has been hanging on a wall in my study ever since. It is an icon of the Annunciation. It depicts the angel Gabriel giving the news to a startled Mary that she is to give birth to a baby boy.

The iconographer is Peter Blackwood, a friend of mine for many years. The first thing to stand out in this icon is the strong colours. In the tradition of icon painting (or "writing") the colours are symbolic: blue stands for divine light or divine presence; red is the colour of blood and earth and represents the incarnation; green indicates new life.

For Eastern Orthodox Christians, contemplating an icon is an act of prayer. In recent decades other Christians, Catholic and Protestant, have been learning that contemplating icons is a valuable spiritual exercise.

Peter Blackwood will bring icons with him to Gisborne for the 2021 Peter Barcham Lecture. Originally planned for 10th October, the new date is Sunday 14th November at 2.30 p.m. By the beginning of October, I'll be able to confirm this date with all our Partnership churches, also Mt Macedon and Lancefield, also the Catholic, Anglican, Church of Christ and Pentecostal congregations in Gisborne. Phone me if you would like further information. 5428-6700.

A note from a fridge:

To admit our weakness and our need to be healed, especially as we try to love each other and listen to each other is to begin to be healed. We need to be healed when we judge and criticize others. We need to be healed in our fears. But we are frightened to be rejected, frightened that others will not be able to accept us as we really are.

We must become conscious that we have fears, that we are weak and cowardly, that we are basically frightened of the demands of the Spirit on each of us, that we are frightened to get together to pray, to discipline ourselves so that we can grow.

For prayer is the opening of our being to the call of love, letting ourselves be opened to peace, to open ourselves to the reality of the world and of our Father, to enter into silence, to become conscious of love, to retreat from activity, to rest and have periods of quiet and in wonderment to give thanks.

What can we do?

1. We can yearn in prayer. We can try to pray with our hearts open, saying "Come!". And if we can't say "Come" with all our hearts at least maybe we can yearn truthfully to want to say "come".
2. We can share together, not hiding our weaknesses, but rather learning to say to one another, "I need you to pray for me, for I am in difficulty and cannot find my way". There is nothing more beautiful than sharing our weaknesses, now weeping and sullen, but with quiet humility.
3. Keep close to the littlest one, looking toward the most suffering one, the one who is companionless and wounded, the one who is a sign of God for us. This is the one who is the revelation of the essential weakness of us all.

The Bible in Australia: A Cultural History – Part 2 of a review by W Hebbard, continued from Partnership in Print Issue 68, August 2021 (Ed: I missed this in Issue 69 – I'm sure you noticed – here is the rest of the promised article from Wendy – with a reminder that the book and an audio edition are both available at the Goldfields Library)

In a culture wary of Bible bashers, the Arts are an important area where Australians continue to grapple with faith, doubt, morality and meaning. People are embarrassed about God. They're embarrassed by biblical images, imagery and angels and by ideas of redemption and salvation. But Tim Winton added, "I think fiction can explain things to people and render experiences of people and of God in a way that is sometimes superior to theology and sermons". Everything has its place in communicating the grace of God. Tim Winton's work "That Eye the Sky" and "Cloudstreet" are some examples. We also have the songwriters Paul Kelly and Nick Cave. A lot of songs have come from the Bible.

Some major ethical challenges facing contemporary Australians: refugees, homophobia and climate change, along with economic inequality, family violence, indigenous recognition and euthanasia. They are prominent moral issues. In this century, they go to the heart of the kind of society which the present generation is shaping. The bible has an ongoing, if inconclusive, role in the public consideration of some such matters. In many cases, the Bible is treated religiously. As the authoritative text for Christian Australians. But at the same time marriage laws, and women in the clergy. Issues that are currently very relevant.

Christian activism has always run in multiple directions. The Bible's implications for social and political life have always been contested. In fact, nearly two and half centuries after the bible's initial translation to Australia transmission. So, in Australia levels of biblical literacy. We asked how and what does the bible measure.

While Australia has changed a lot since the 1870s it is still true that good governance and a flourishing society require genuine wisdom. The time is for wise, robust, informed pluralism. In this context, the Bible remains relevant in Australian life and public conversation.

The bible has given rise to one of the world's major reservoirs of ethical reflection. It underpins a long and diverse tradition of thought on social, moral and political questions.

To conclude, while the church's own record has been very mixed and at times patently destructive, the Bible variously interpreted continues to appear in startling ways as a source of inspiration, power and practical wisdom.

POEM

Thankyou for giving me the key
To live my life more joyfully.
Thankyou, for showing me the way
To be more loving every day.
You taught me how to share a smile
With a kind friend once in a while.
Or even with a stranger , who
May need a little sunshine, too.

I saw a rainbow in the sky.
Involuntary came the cry—
"A rainbow .Look ! How lovely there."
The stranger thanked me for his share
Of colour on that wintry afternoon,
Quick flash of friendship in a smoke-filled room .
Surprise it was to me
That such a brief affinity
Was of some value to that person, who,
Perhaps is feeling as I do.
How can we show to those we meet
Life isn't sour ---- it's often very sweet.

Most people are finding lockdown worse this time around, and it is important that we continue to ring others to just have a chat. The Zoom 'after worship' chats provided by the Ministry Team were much appreciated as a way of keeping in touch and encouraging each other.

The repairs to the Riddells Creek church are almost complete, and are once again being slowed down by Covid.

Quotes for electrical work to be undertaken at Woodend were sent to Presbytery in August, and floorplans for the rest of the work in the Hall are to be finalised shortly.

A quote for the insulation for the Romsey Manse has been received and a second quote is being sought.

One day we will be able to meet together in person!

A quote from Friday night's Fish and Chips at Kyneton – one of many shared after we shared our own experiences of prayer in small groups as part of the worship:

“Praying and living deeply, richly and fully have become for me almost indistinguishable. Prayer is being present, sharing love, opening life to transcendence. It is not necessarily words addressed heavenward. Prayer is entering into the pain or joy of another person. Prayer is what I am doing when I love wastefully, passionately and wondrously and invite others to do so.”
